

Community Forest Training Program COHORT 2

Are you a local government agency, land trust, or tribal entity interested in learning how to leverage local land assets to promote economic growth, foster a healthier environment, and strengthen your community?

For more than two decades, Trust for Public Land has led the community forest movement, collaborating with local partners, communities, and tribes to establish enduring, protected open spaces that are managed, owned, and enjoyed by residents. The Community Forest Training Program leverages TPL's expertise to educate local leaders on this innovative approach to forest conservation and best practices for ensuring economic, public health, and social benefits directly enrich communities.

WHAT ARE COMMUNITY FORESTS?

Community forests are protected forest lands that contribute to healthy, flourishing communities, and they can be powerful tools for helping to enact local visions as articulated by residents. These unique assets are land-based economic development tools that deliver positive outcomes to the residents, visitors, and businesses located in their service areas, including economic development opportunities through recreation, timber, and tourism; environmental benefits such as watershed protection, habitat conservation, and preserved biodiversity; and more.

WHAT TO EXPECT

The Community Forest Training Program is a 5-month virtual workshop series designed to provide land managers the strategies, skills, and resources needed to create and sustain community forests in their municipalities. This program will inform eligible communities across the U.S. about the benefits and possibilities of community forests; provide training and technical assistance that leverages TPL's best practices to support successful acquisition, governance, and stewardship; and support the creation of community forests on the ground where available.
